Monte S. Willis, MD, PhD
Indiana University School of Medicine

I’ve had the privilege to contribute to ASIP throughout my career initially as a member of the ASIP Experimental Biology program committee (2007-2017), followed by service as the Chair of the Committee for Career Development and Diversity (2011-2015) and Chair of the Education Committee (2014-2017). Currently, I serve as Councilor-at-Large (2017-present) on the ASIP Council. The Nominating Committee is a critical function of the ASIP in recognizing the essential contributions of our membership at all stages of academic and educational career development. My previous and current experiences supporting the ASIP mission developing scientific programming, career development, and educational programs could uniquely contribute knowledge of our membership in evaluating nominations for our prestigious awards recognizing outstanding academic pathology contributions.
